

ABSTRACT

Nurse caring behavior is very important in meeting patient satisfaction this is one indicator of the quality of care in a hospital. This is control to nursing practice, it is also a dynamic approach, where nurse work to improve their care for patients. The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship between nursing caring about infusion with the incidence of phlebitis in room of RSUD Malang

The type of research used was correlational analytic research with a cross sectional approach. The sample in this study was in the patient room of RSUD Malang city who fulfilled the inclusion criteria in october 2022 – january 2023 and fulfilled the inclusion as many 28 respondent whose method of selection was done by purposive sampling technique and showed that more respondents through observation VIP.

Effort to increasing nurse caring behavior with and individual approach can be done by increasing caring knowledge and skills through training, seminars, workshp and through formal nursing education, increasing caring knowledge and skills. Will not necessarily make nurse's behave better caring not again can make behave better

Keyword : Nurse caring with the incidence of phlebitis